

Dr Renata B. Malta
Professor
School of Communication –
Universidade Federal de Sergipe –
Brazil

Renata B. Malta

Renata Malta is a professor of communication at Universidade Federal de Sergipe (Brazil). Permanent professor at Post graduation Programme in Communication – PPGCOM-UFS. She is currently doing a postdoc at Universidad de Sevilla - Spain. She received a Ph.D. in Communication from Universidade Metodista de São Paulo (UMESP), and did part of her thesis at Carleton University (Ottawa – Canada); M.A. in Communication from Universidade Estadual Paulista, and a B.A. in Journalism from Universidade Metodista de São Paulo (UMESP). Her research interests include Gender Studies and media, Cultural Studies, Social representation in media.

She currently teaches “Communication and Cultural Studies” at the graduate level, and has supervised eight M.A. theses (four concluded and four ongoing), all related to subjects concerning Gender Studies, Race and Ethnicity, Sexuality in the Communication field. In a previous life, she has worked as a journalist for two TV channels (Rede Globo – EPTV and TVE Cambrás) and has lived in different countries, what opened her perspectives in life and helped to learn different languages.

