Tomi Niemi

I come from the University of Vaasa, where I work as a doctoral student in the unit of social and health management. Having a work history in health care has led me to our unit which is primarily focused on the complex issues of welfare and management among services, state and individuals. I'm interested in digital technology and the creative development of organizations. The topics of digital transformation and organizational creativity are part of my current Ph. D. work, where I'm studying what kind of changes and opportunities the rapid development of digital technology offers and how organizations and people can make use of the change.
