The 8th International Conference on Communication and Management (ICCM2023) “What will Communication be like? Future directions on global challenges and tensions” will take place 04-07 December 2022, in Athens, Greece. With the perspective of examining future directions on communication global challenges and tensions (post-pandemic situations, environmental crisis, wars and other global tensions), this conference calls for themes that will assist educators and learners alike to reflect on what we have learnt from our recent past, and how we will take these lessons learnt to shape the future of communication, management and leadership for the generations to come.
