

Academic Member and Ambassador
Communication Institute of Greece

Gina L. Solano, PhD

Assistant Professor of Educational Technology
Secretary of the University Senate

Secondary Education and Educational Technology
Department

313 Fitzelle Hall

Oneonta, NY 13820

Gina.Solano@oneonta.edu

Dr. Gina Solano is an accomplished professor specializing in educational technology, with extensive experience teaching in undergraduate and graduate programs. Her expertise spans research, digital media, STEM education, instructional design, online learning, and multimedia. Dr. Solano is a dynamic educator who has presented and published widely on emerging technologies such as artificial intelligence, virtual reality, augmented reality (AR/VR/XR), gamification, digital storytelling, and micro-credentials at national and international conferences.

Dr. Solano holds a Ph.D. in Educational Technology, an M.Ed. in ESL Education, and a B.A. in English Teaching. She has directed impactful service-learning initiatives, community outreach programs, and international study trips. Her research focuses on innovative applications of technology in education, including game-based learning, professional development for educators, and integrating mindfulness practices through technology to enhance student well-being.

With over two decades of teaching experience across K-12 and higher education settings, Dr. Solano is passionate about leveraging technology to foster creativity, collaboration, and engagement in diverse learning environments. She is committed to using her expertise to drive positive social change and improve educational opportunities globally.